INTRODUCTION to the 2005 SUPPLEMENT

The present author first produced "A Bibliography of the Bayonet" in January 2000. (It is currently out of print.) Since that time, much additional material has been published and a number of pre-2000 references have come to light which were not included in the original Bibliography. It therefore seems appropriate to publish a Supplementary Bibliography at this point in time, exactly five years on from the appearance of the original volume.

The period 2000-2005 has seen the publication of some 30 new books on the history of the bayonet, or on bayonet identification. Some authors have chosen to produce general works on world bayonets, resulting in the appearance of pioneering volumes in the Russian language and a continuation of the controversial series by the French author J.-P. Vial. Others have concentrated on narrower fields of study, publishing books on, for example, plug bayonets, Kalashnikov rifle bayonets, German etched-blade 'Dress Bayonets' or British spike bayonets. A major three-volume series has been produced in Poland on the bayonets of that country, and the identification of German service bayonets has been particularly well covered.

It has proved possible to obtain details of many more military bayonet fighting or training manuals, adding to a seemingly endless and bewildering series of instructional booklets. Such publications are here sub-divided into manuals exclusively concerned with the bayonet, followed by listings of more general training manuals which contain chapters or sections on the bayonet. Manuals are listed nation by nation within each of these two categories.

A steady stream of magazine and journal articles has continued to be produced, with the two specialised serial publications, the Journal of the Society of American Bayonet Collectors and the Journal de l'Association Française des Collectionneurs de Baïonnettes, proving to be particularly rich sources of interesting material.

The widespread availability of digital technology has resulted in some researchers choosing to disseminate their work through the medium of CD-ROM's rather than conventional printed books. Significant studies of Turkish bayonets and United States Bayonet Patents have for example been produced by such means in recent years. Appendix A covers material of this kind.

The articles by Charles Dangré, the Director of the Musée Royale de l'Armée in Brussels, published in the Museum's journal entitled 'Carnet de la Fourragère' during the years 1924 to 1931 have long been recognised as a seminal study in bayonet identification, and particularly important to the study of German 'Ersatz' models of the First World War. The titles, subject matter and numbering of these articles are somewhat confusing to say the least, so a complete listing of Dangré's work is included here as Appendix B.

PART 3 - MAGAZINE & JOURNAL ARTICLES

INTRODUCTION Entries are in the alphabetical order of authors' surnames, and articles by each author are chronological within each section of the Bibliography.

The listings are sub-divided to make subject matter easier to locate. The initial sections contain General material which is not concerned with the bayonets of any one particular nation. The 'Bayonet Collecting' Section contains entries on collecting techniques, valuation, restoration etc., as well as a few articles on bayonet collectors themselves. General articles on specific classes of bayonets - Plug Bayonets, Socket Bayonets, Sword Bayonets etc., follow.

The bulk of the entries are however arranged country by country, subject countries being in alphabetical order. Within each national division are sub-divisions according to the type of bayonet concerned. These vary from country to country according to the subject matter of articles which have been written, but may include General: Bayonet Markings: Plug Bayonets: Socket Bayonets: Sword Bayonets: Knife Bayonets: Spike Bayonets etc., with perhaps extra categories for Fencing Bayonets or even Toy Bayonets where appropriate.

Some articles appear more than once in the list. For example, an article comparing Belgian and Turkish bayonet models can be found in both the Belgian and Turkish sections. Similarly, an article on Indian blade markings might appear in both British Colonial and Indian sections.

The division between sword bayonet and knife bayonet is a difficult one and perhaps arbitrary. Here, the sword bayonet category includes early hirschfänger-style weapons and later [typically 19th Century] bayonets which usually fit muzzle loading or black-powder breech-loading single-shot firearms. Knife bayonets may not be much shorter, but are generally 20th Century issues fitting small-bore repeating firearms. The French Modèle 1866 Chassepot is hence an example of a classic sword bayonet, the British Pattern 1907 a knife bayonet. Hybrid sword-socket bayonets appear in a separate sub-division.

In some instances, the subject matter of an article is not obvious from its title. In such cases, where possible, the subject matter is given in square brackets and in italic script after the title.

NOTE

The series is unfinished. There is no text coverage of the conversions of Austrian and Dutch bayonets shown in Plate VIII, Figs. 134 -142, as Dangré died in 1931.

An undated reprint of Articles 2 - 10 was produced in Belgium, possibly in the 1950's. The layout of the eight plates is altered, but the original French text remains unchanged. The reprint was produced by Club Winchester 66, Collectionneurs D'Armes Anciennes [Verzamelaars Oude Wapens], Wittestraat 50, 8710 Heule, België.

AFTER-WORD

Although every effort has been made to ensure that this Bibliography is as comprehensive as possible, some omissions are unfortunately inevitable. The author would therefore be most grateful to any reader who can supply details of any references which may have been missed.

It is the intention to continue updating the computer files on which this Bibliography is based to include material published after 31st Dec. 2004. After a suitable interval of perhaps a further 5 years, it may then be possible to publish a 2nd Supplementary Bibliography to update the references listed in this current Edition. Any additional material, produced prior to this date but undiscovered at the present time, would be included in such an update.
